

Parshat Balak

Parshat Balak deals with the Moabite king Balak sending Balaam on a journey to curse the Jewish people. When he gets there God makes him bless them instead of curse them. While he did not fulfill Balak's request, he was guided by God to bless instead of curse the Israelites.

Many of you were dreading going on etgar (or leaving camp for other reasons). Does anyone have any examples of something you were really worried about that turned out okay?

How was this week's experience different in small groups rather than being with the entire edah?

Did you realize any strengths or weaknesses you have as an edah?

How did it feel when you returned to camp and joined together with the rest of the edah?

- Do you appreciate camp more now, etc?

How can you use your return from this journey to impact you will pave the path of the rest of your journey for the summer?

Be prepared to share a story from your etgar experience with the rest of the edah as we come back together from being split up, allowing for us to be whole again as we share our experiences.
