

Peulat Shabbat August 1, 2009
Solelim

Campers are split into five groups, each with one counselor. They are given tablets and the ten commandments written on separate pieces of paper. The campers have to order the commandments in the order that they think is most important. They stick the commandments to the tablets. The groups then present why they chose that order with a spokesperson from the group.

Five other counselors are hiding and running around. Each of these counselors has a sock attached to them that can be ripped off by the campers. Each counselor must be caught twice by each group so each group catches all ten commandments. We might not have time for all the groups to catch all of the counselors/commandments, but the group that catches the most wins. When a counselor is caught they give the group a number and the group has to recite that commandment. If they don't, then the group can't has not caught that group.
