Round Robin

The morning is Secret Agent training. After completing each training exercise/game, the team gets an envelope of clues. The clues are photocopies of incriminating photographs we took of the staff, and notes written by made-up investigators. At the end of the morning, each team has all the same clues. During the suspect review, each team goes over the clues + picks a suspect, then presents that + why to the edah.

The treasure hunt starts with a tape-recorded message from a staff member, who has info on who the kidnapper is. But he's too scared to come to the Edah, so they must follow a treasure hunt leading all around camp to get to him. This turn → is to throw off any pursuers. At the end, everyone winds up at the same place where the kidnapper is hiding - we used the A-Side office. When everyone has arrived, the "kidnapper" releases Deborah + surrenders to the other counselors.

I have included photocopies of a hand fil of the clues given out in the morning. There ~~are~~<sup>were</sup> a lot more, + the pictures were much more visible (photocopies of photocopies don't come out that well)

This tape recorded message is brought in by Counselors dressed all in black, and is played to start the day.

Good morning.

At precisely 9:17 this morning, Deborah Bromberg, Rosh Edah of Illnot was reported missing. Apparently she has been kidnapped by person or persons unknown. We suspect the involvement of several Tzad Aleph staff members. Your mission, should you choose to accept it, is to locate Deborah + apprehend her captors. In order to complete your mission, you must utilize all of your investigative skills while gathering clues. It is imperative that you ~~keep~~ hold onto all ~~of the~~ clues you find, no matter how minor or unimportant they may seem at the time.

Good luck.

④ Pictionary

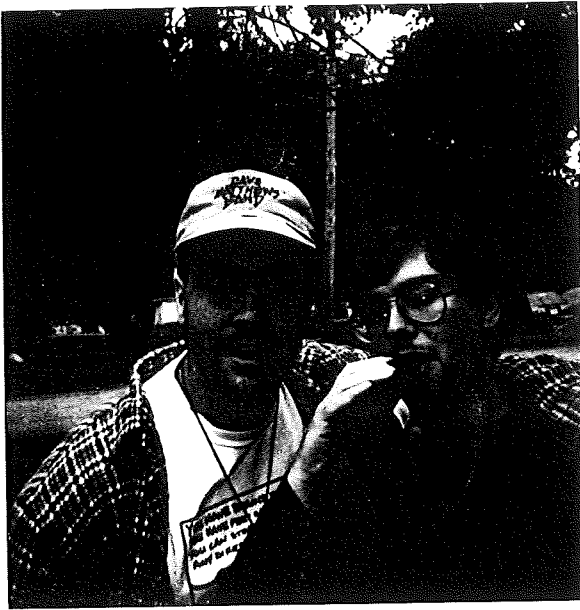

Sometimes secret agents can't communicate with each other directly, so they must learn to use other methods of communication. Once you have proven your worth as a true agent, you'll be given the next clue.

⑤ Red light — Green light
